Our Cat's Day

Our Cat's Day

Albatros

Pleased to meet you

This is a young tomcat.
Neither a full-grown cat
nor an itsy-bitsy kitten.
A young cat.
Call him what you like.

That's right.
Think of a name for him.
Go on!

And what is your name?

Good morning!

Only cats and kittens can do this. And people who copy them.

Arch your back.
Push your spine up,
then pull it down.

Forget to meow,
though—it won't work.
Good morning!

Can you arch your back too?

First, to the toilet!

Cats are clean animals.
For them, a home toilet
is just the thing.

Not a flush toilet, of course!
A cat's toilet is a tray
with special sand in it.
We change the sand often.

Do you know how to clean a cat's toilet?

Our cat cleans his fur.
He has the right kind of tongue for it.

Let's wash!

Every morning
our cat and I must wash.
I wash my face, brush my teeth,
and comb my hair.

And you, do you like water on your face?

Breakfast sets you up for the day

Our cat is hungry. On his plate is meat from a pouch.
This bowl is for water,
this one for biscuits.

Yum! He's eaten it all but wishes he hadn't.

What are you having?

Fresh air

Time to go out.
The garden is both a meadow and a jungle.

Can you find all the cats in the garden?

There's so much to see here. So much to smell! We run around and play.

First successes

What's that you've got,
little cat? A dead bird?
A mouse?

It's your first catch.
I can see you're proud of it.

At last I've learned to tie my shoelaces.
Yay!

What have you achieved today?
