The Little Girl and the Rain

plic!

Suddenly, she felt a drop.

plic!

The little girl held out her hands and let
the rain run down them.

plic!

plic!

plic!

Suddenly it began to rain hard.

The little girl ran home.

The rain chased after the little girl. So she ran inside and closed the door.

The rain tapped on the window,
calling for her to come back out.

“Have you seen the little girl, big dog?”
asked the rain.

Big dog shook himself...

Then... what's this?
Squoosh! Squoosh!
The sound of boots in a puddle.

It was the little girl,
all dressed up for
the rain.

The rain fell softly and merrily.

A timeless story, this poetic tale follows a little girl's enchanting encounter with the rain. Lyrical prose meets delicate, dreamlike illustrations – and together, they create a world where raindrops whisper secrets and nature comes alive with gentle magic.
