Hytte A Cabin in the Mountains

Mountains are most beautiful early in the morning.

So Sammy set out for the peak as soon as the sun rose.

He always takes the same path up . . .

. . . and the same path down. That's how he likes it.

"Hello? Is anyone here?"

The storm raged on ominously. Woo-oo-oo!
The wind lashed the cabin . . .

“Yippee! There’s so much snow!”

“I’m glad we’re here together, Alfie.”

“Me too.” The bear smiled.

Tired and content, they slept soundly all night long.

Mountains, sun, snow. A little cabin we will call a hytte.
And a little bunny who loves taking regular hikes in the mountains. But what if a sunny day should turn into a snowstorm, tossing his map into the air so that he doesn't know where to go? The hytte is his savior and refuge. Thank goodness he finds it on his way and opens its door . . .

A story about home, (in)security, fear and courage, unexpected friendship, hope, and above all, the magic of seemingly deserted places.
